DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-26 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Aiello ('211) when taken in view of Litchford ('324) or Larrick, Jr. et al ('741).

The patent to Aiello discloses frequency hopping for baseband transmitters. The baseband transmitters or Time Domain Downconversion Radars. Note that on col. 2, lines 16+. Aiello discloses that the pulse repetition rates of the radar system are varied or changed during divisible time slots so as to avoid interference. Avoidance of such interference improves co-locatability of multiple radars located in a region.

The difference between claims 1 and 14 of the instant application and the system disclosed in Aiello is the instant claims specify that the frequency adjustment is achieved by a "frequency variable oscillator". Aiello merely discloses that the frequency adjustment is desirable and achieved but does not disclose specific structure for such adjustment.

Litchford teaches (see col. 5, lines 42-51, and Fig. 5) that the pulse repetition frequency may be adjusted by using a frequency variable oscillator. Larrick, Jr. et al also teaches using a frequency variable oscillator (104, 106 in Fig. 1). Thus, in light of the teachings of Larrick, Jr. et al or Litchford, it would be obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to have utilized a frequency variable oscillator in the system of Aiello to adjust the radars internal timing frequency during the display update periods, since Aiello does not disclose specific structure. Claims 1 and 14 are so rejected.

Dependent claims 2-13 and 15-26 are further provided by the combination of the above noted patents taken as a whole.
